Wilmina Rowland Speaks On Student War Relief To Open I.S.S. Campaign

Every Student Asked
To Contribute One Dollar

The opening of the International Student Service drive next week to raise $2,500 for World Student Relief will be marked by a three day visit from the executive secretary of the American branch of the W.S.R., Miss Wilmina Rowland.

Miss Rowland will be officially welcomed to the University by Dr. F. Cyril James at a Faculty luncheon scheduled for Monday noon, and will stay at R.V.C. as the guest of Dr. M. V. Roscoe. In addition to McGill, Miss Rowland will speak addressing groups of students at to student assemblies at the Université de Montreal, Sir George Williams College, Montreal High School and Macdonald College. The time and place of Miss Rowland's addresses to McGill will be announced in Monday's Daily.

Wilmina Rowland's life story is full of her wide connections with student life both in American and in the many countries of the world in which she has lived. She is a native of Georgia, did her undergraduate work at Wilson College and holds degrees from Yale University and Union Theological Seminary.

The I.S.S. campaign to help in the effort of providing for prisoners of war, students in battle-torn countries, refugees and evacuees requires the support of every student in order to reach its objective. And during the course of next week all students will be asked to contribute one dollar as their share in supporting the increased work of the W.S.R.

The committee in charge of the campaign feel particularly fortunate in being able to present Miss Rowland to the student body because of her outstanding sympathy and knowledge regarding the work of the W.S.R. today.

After her graduation from college, Miss Rowland spent three years in China as a teacher; and during her residence in the Far East she travelled in China, Japan, and India. She also spent a full winter studying in Europe, which gave her an opportunity to visit universities in England and Wales and to become acquainted with student work in other European countries.

Following her visit to McGill next week, Miss Rowland will continue on to Queen's University, where an I.S.S. campaign will also be in progress.

Pre-Med Society Hears Pedley

"Medicine, Past Present And Future"
Topic Of Lecture

The members of the Pre-Medical Society were addressed by Dr. F. G. Pedley in the Union Ballroom yesterday. Dr. Pedley, who is an assistant professor of Industrial Hygiene at McGill, lectured on "Medicine, Past, Present and Future."

In his lecture he traced the evolution of modern medicine from the wonderful discoveries of Louis Pasteur to the medicine of the modern age with the discoveries of the sulfa drugs and penicillin.

"Despite the many advancements in the medical field in modern times," stated Dr. Pedley, "there are many disadvantages in the modern system of private medical practice, the most important being the high cost of medical services, which in most cases are unobtainable for the poorer class of people. There definitely seems to be a popular demand for government-sponsored medical care."

In conclusion Dr. Pedley stated that the medical and pre-medical students of today will experience an important and interesting change in the field of medicine.

A Story of the Front
The hobo knocked at the back of the house and the lady appeared.

"Lady, I was at the front!"

"Poor man," she intervened, "just wait 'til I get you some food and then tell your story."

After he had eaten she anxiously inquired, "And what brave deeds did you do at the front?"

"I knocked," he replied meekly, "but couldn't make nobody hear, so I came around to the back."

Middlebury Faces McGill In Debate

Discussion Held
At R.V.C.
This Afternoon

"Resolved that Trade Unions should be incorporated by law", is the topic of debate this afternoon when McGill opposes Middlebury College at the R.V.C. Common Room. This topic is one which is currently being widely discussed both here in Canada and in the United States, and was chosen chiefly on that account.

McGill will uphold the negative side of the resolution, and will be represented by Lloyd McClintock and Joan MacFarlane. The former, a third year student in the Law Faculty, is expected to present the legal and political aspects of the subject, while Joan, President of the Women's Debating Union, will consider the resolution from the economic angle.

Middlebury has won the last two debates against McGill, and is reported to be sending a strong team in an endeavour to make it three-in-a-row. The judges of the debate which is scheduled for 5 p.m.; will be an official of the International Labor Office and a professor in the Faculty of Arts.

The Middlebury debaters will be guests at the athletic festival later in the evening, when their schoolmates clash with McGill in competition of a different sort. The debate today initiates a series of inter-collegiate meets, which will include clashes with Macdonald and Sir George Williams' Colleges.

U. of T. Debates Japanese Gains

Growing Population
Should Be Noted
In Post-war Plans

Allowance should be made for Japan's expanding population in post-war territorial adjustments, the University College Parliament of Toronto decided Friday in defeating the motion, "Resolved: That Japan should not be allowed to expand beyond the Japanese Islands after the war."

Introducing the motion, Prime Minister Roy Clark said that any Japanese expansion after this war would be territorial aggrandisement and a violation of the Atlantic Charter. We need cooperation and understanding in the world and this will not be possible if there is expansion of one country at the expense of another.

Increase in population observable over the last 50 years is uniform all over the world, the speaker pointed out. If we attempt to solve Japan's problems by allowing her to expand, how are we going to give justice to other countries whose populations are also expanding?

Speaking against the motion, Gord McCaffrey said that we are concerned with Japan's future state, and the real problem lies in the attitude of European peoples to the people of the East, looking on them as backward people to be exploited. Japan will have no markets for her manufactured goods if she has no colonies, and high tariffs keep her goods out of foreign countries.

Government speaker Phillip Cooper said that Japan is a theocracy, ruled by Shintoism, and that it is considered to be the divine mission of the Japanese to bring all others within this religion by any means at their disposal.

J. Turchin, for the opposition, said that in preparing for this war, Japan was aided by materials from Manchuria, Korea and the United States, and is not economically self-sufficient. The question, he said, is not one of whether Japan should be allowed to expand or not, but the degree of expansion which should be allowed.

After the debate Prime Minister

The priest proposed the university to be located at Worcester, Mass.

Queens Holds Youth Meeting

Committee
Gives Report
Of Religious Groups

Kingston, February 4.—(CUP)—The findings of the commission on religion, a sub-division of the Ontario Youth Commission, were discussed at a meeting of S.C.M., Newman Club Hillel Foundation, and I.V.C.F. representatives at a meeting held in Ban Righ Common Room on Sunday, January 30.

Dean Douglas gave a brief resume of the purpose of the Youth Commission, and mentioned the active part taken by D. W. A. MacIntosh and Dr. Gregory Vlastos, former members of the staff of Queen's University, in the formation and work of the commission. The commission was formed to discuss the problems of youth in the post-war world under the headings of employment, health, recreation, minorities, family, religion, and citizenship, and to present concrete proposals to the government under these headings.

"That comparative religion should be made available to final-year high school students" was proposed, in addition to a resolution that "Communities take an active stand against all racial and religious discrimination occurring in the community, with special consideration being given to those minorities isolated by war conditions." Both resolutions were approved and are being forwarded to the commission.

The Ontario Youth Commission has been taking an active interest in matters relating to youth in the post-war world.

CHANT D'AUTOMNE

J'ai fait d'abord le tour du monde
Sans qu'une fois fille repende
D'autre façon que par des mots
A l'aveu pénible des maux
Qu'elle imposait à mon coeur tendre.

Quand je revins à mon départ
Je n'avais donc pas à m'attendre
Qu'au moment de mon retour
Je me le point à mon enquête,
Et je me fis raser la tête.

Ma retraite hélas ne dura
Que la quinzaine ou je fus ras.
Comme la saison est plus douce
A mesure que l'herbe pousse,
L'illusion dans mes cheveux
Crut jusqu'au jour où vacillante,
Elle flechit et sur mes yeux
Jeta son ombre chatoyante.

Je repris le chemin des coeurs.
J'eus le succès de Don Quichotte:
De belles filles qui chuchotaient
En vous glissant un oeil moqueur
Qui vous desarma et vous desoia;
Vous vous dites qu'elles sont folles,
Votre illusion s'amontit,
Voilà vos jambes qui flageolent
Et vous en revenez ainsi.

Les herbes d'automne représentent,
Le vent retire ses caresses.
L'un après l'autre, mes cheveux
S'écarteront devant mes yeux;
Toutes mes pelures seront nues
Des corbeaux noirciront les nues,
Et frissonnant dans mon alcove
Je secouerai mon crane chauve.

Maybe you can find the man of your dreams tonight at the Athletic Festivals, or maybe you have already found him, but just haven't got him hooked as yet. Anyhow, here's your chance, girls—and it only happens once a year.

Here's a tip for you gals in fourth year who are beginning to get a bit desperate. As you know, this is Leap-Year. So... Just invite the man of your heart to the Spinster Spree, look your prettiest, give him a good time, and then, when you

U. of T. President Notes Research Progress

In his annual report for 1942-43, Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto, stated yesterday that great achievements had been recorded in education and war research. He suggested a future program of building expansion, increased endowments and scholarships and possible reconsideration of academic salary schedules.

"Buildings necessary for our adequate accommodation should be erected as soon as financial resources permit and priorities can be obtained," Dr. Cody said. He urged "escape from the fault of unpreparedness."

The report said the university's Connaught Laboratories reached highest production in its history last year, supplying needs of the armed forces for vaccines and sera "in very large measure."

Queen's Coeds Confined To University Residence

News has been received from Queen's University. Twenty-five girls have been attacked by scarlet fever. As a precautionary measure they were confined to their University residence, Goodwin House. The quarantine was put into effect last Thursday and was to be in effect for two weeks, but owing to the decrease of cases it has been decided to lift the quarantine today.

This is the first time in thirty years anything of the like has happened at Queen's. The epidemic is on the downgrade, the authorities stated, and all will be normal again in a few days.

Clothes Needed For Russians

War Council
Sponsors Effort
This Week

All students who have clothing to contribute to the Aid to Russia campaign which is being sponsored by the War Council this week are asked to bring it in immediately and to place it in the boxes set up in the various university buildings.

Although some 170,000 pounds of clothing has already been shipped to Russia through the donations of Montrealers, much more is still needed, and students are being asked to help in every way possible.

Shoes, overcoats, jackets, coats, dresses, skirts, suits, underwear, hats, furs and mitts are needed, but in addition to the clothing, there is also a very definite demand for first aid kits, sheets, blankets, towels, watches, linen and soap.

Students who desire an acknowledgment of their donation from the Russian student who will receive it, may pin a slip of paper with their names and addresses upon it along with a short message of encouragement with the articles they are sending.

De Senectute

Statisticians tell us that our population is growing older. That is, with improved standards of nutrition, better medical care, more decent working conditions, people are living longer. To the keepers of the public purse, this development is causing no little concern, for a larger group of older persons means in theory at least, a larger group of non-employables, and this, in turn, means larger sums must be appropriated for national pension schemes. On the other hand this tendency may prove invaluable to the body politic in the stabilizing effect it will lend to the post-war world.

In attempting to differentiate between the social attitudes of old age on the one hand, and youth on the other, the traditional view has been to treat youth as being progressive, forward-minded, and to consider old age as conservative, mindful of the past. It is more than possible that this interpretation is not entirely correct. For, is not old age to be thought of as opposed to extreme and violent change, rather than as opposed to change of any sort. Youth is always associated with change, yet we all know that change can be either progressive or regressive. As examples of regressive change there are the revolutions in Italy and Germany following the last World War, revolutions in which youth played a dominant, if not the dominant role.

The minds of the vast majority of youth today are devoted to the prosecution of a war. Whatever issues might have concerned us in peace-time, they have been set aside in favor of the national emergency. The war-time mind is one in which the fundamental need of self-preservation must, and does predominate. Not only must it predominate, but it must do so to the real detriment of those lesser issues which in peaceful days would have been our normal concern. The question which we are raising here is this: how remote, how forgotten are these problems. Are they capable of being revived immediately after the war by a generation which has consciously had to ignore them for nearly five years? It will not be sufficient that they be revived a generation or two from now—too much valuable time will have been lost.

Can our generation adjust itself to a world of ordered judgments in the place of those hurried expediences which are necessary when a people is faced with annihilation? It is very possible in the post-war world that youth will have forgotten how to be tolerant, and that the one group in whom this priceless virtue will reside will be that of the older generation. Any plan or plans for tomorrow's world which the statesmen work out must be viewed with these thoughts in mind. The future must not be thought of only as a technological paradise, but accompanied by the realization that any lasting progress will be made only on the firm foundation of a youth re-assimilated to the role of citizen. In the western world we do not wish a recurrence of the conflict between the generations which characterized the political life of Germany at the end of the last war. Let us recognize the enormous task confronting our generation, and may our elders for whom the privilege of free enquiry has remained open during the war years lead the counsel of their experience.

Recently the literary world celebrated the 165th birthday of George Gordon Lord Byron who was born on January 22nd, 1788, in London. Lord Byron's life was marked by a passionate devotion to the cause of liberty and to the cause of the common man. Both in his writings and his deeds he made common cause with other liberals for freedom.

In 1820 the Greeks rebelled against the cruel rule of the Turks and immediately Lord Byron threw himself into the struggle giving the Greeks financial assistance and finally lost his life fighting for Greek freedom in 1824.

History is repeating itself to-day when our heroic Greek Allies are fighting once more for their freedom from Nazi slavery. The lamp of liberty that was lit in ancient Greece never burned more brightly than it does to-day among the fighting Greeks.

It is in tribute to this fierce resolve and love of liberty of the Greek peoples that the Y.M.H.A. Little Theatre will present as its second Major Production Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night".

Englishmen Are Different

Typical of the poetry appearing in The Daily of 1939 is the following discussion of the relative values of nationalities in the marriage market.

I've always been a sort of International belle. Practically all the men of practically all the countries have fell. But not the Englishmen. No. Because Englishmen are different. Yes.

Now, I seem to have a way with Frenchmen. They keep my 'and. And when Frenchmen do it I think it's grand. Italians seem-a to me da songs, and read-a to me da pomes. Bohemians invite me at peculiar hours to their homes.

I like an occasional Arabian. Because there is something about a Sheikh That makes me feel weak. (Technique) They are violently ornamental and surrounded with tons of atmosphere. Of the heavy Oriental type, and none of that Rah-Rah-Collegiate-I haven't got-any-garters-on stuff we have here.

Danes Are unreliable in lovers' lanes. Russians are easy! Nice home boys. Get a Russian on a chesterfield, I mean a davenport, A sofa, A lounge, A couch, And—OUCH! Russians go in for pinches With their clinches. Remember how the Russians talked about a Five Year Plan?

Any Russian I have ever known could get farther in five MINUTES than any other man in five CENTURIES can! With them there's no Five Year Plan. Each and every Russian is a Five-Minute Man! I used to know An Eskimo. He smiled at me and said "Let's go!" (When Eskimos Goes THEY GOES) I like sons of Poland, On the whole, and They don't object to me. But Englishmen! Those ENGLISHMEN! Well, Listen!

I should be the answer to an Englishman's dream,—if Englishmen dream!—But from fantasy they are exempt. I conciliate them, I ingratiate them, I never do a THING to aggravate them. Have you ever seen me laugh at a monologue, however dopey? Have you ever seen me pull A bull—Dog's tail, Or fall To sympathize with the English for being misunderstood, until I become simply dopey? I never address them in a Cockney accent or refer to them as Blokes, I even, so help me, try to laugh at their jokes! Englishmen have a way of looking at you that does something to you. They don't smile into your eyes or gaze at your lips—they just look right through you. And to force them to listen to a word that you say, You have to stand heavily on their toes, And push your nose right against their nose, And scream "ARE YOU LISTENING?" in a bar-maidenly way. At which they will glance at you mistily and say "ER—What's that?" And by the time you have repeated it all, they are no longer in the same place that you are. For weeks and weeks, You flatter them and woo them and do everything except drape them with garlands of flowers, And pat their cheeks, And listen to their troubles for hours and hours and hours, And some day you will get your reward, and it will not be a kiss, It will be this: "You're not such a bad sort—Old Thing!" There's something about being called Old Thing, That reminds me of silver dollars, the kind that when you drop them on the counter they don't ring. I love Englishmen. They wear tweed suits and mackintoshes And riding-boots. They shun galoshes. They shun pie, too, preferring trifle. But not little trifles like me! Me, the international flame! Englishmen can't seem to remember my name! On second thoughts, I hate Englishmen. And I mean HATE! They wear wool mufflers! They can't talk straight. They dance like robots with the rheumatism! I'm one little girl that they don't fliz. It's an easy thing to forget An Englishman. But, SOME day, I will GET An Englishman!!!!

A l'Universite de Montreal

Invitation aux étudiants de McGill

Depuis plusieurs semaines l'U. de M. est représentée dans la ligue senior.

Au prix de grandes difficultés, tant financières que l'un ordre sportif, le conseil de l'Association Générale des Etudiants, grâce à la persévérance de son président et à l'enthousiasme des officiers du C.E.O.C., a réussi ce tour de force remarquable: organiser de toutes pièces, en plein milieu de la saison, une équipe de calibre senior. En temps normal, la chose aurait été surprenante, mais en temps de guerre il s'agit presque d'un miracle.

A cause d'un manque de cohésion, facilement compréhensible, les Carabins dans leurs premières parties n'ont pas paru tout à fait à la hauteur de la situation. Mais tôt, sous l'habile direction de Sylvio Mantha, ils se sont définitivement affirmés des adversaires avec lesquels il faudra compter dans la course au championnat.

Les étudiants de l'Université de Montréal sont naturellement très enthousiastes au sujet de leur nouveau club. On les voit nombreux aux parties des Carabins et leurs encouragements sont un grand stimulant pour les joueurs.

Il nous ferait plaisir de voir aux parties de la ligue senior des étudiants de McGill. La solidarité universitaire et un commun esprit sportif seraient certainement une manière intéressante et efficace de promouvoir la bonne entente entre nos centres de culture.

L'enthousiasme qu'on vous connaît pour le sport, messieurs du McGill, est d'ailleurs un gage certain de l'intérêt que vous portez aux Carabins.

Vous êtes les bienvenus dans nos rangs aux parties de la ligue Senior.

président du Comité de publicité.

CAUCs Play Redmen Today At Noon

Exhibition Hockey Game At Forum

Tonight's game against Middlebury should put the Redmen in the pink of playing form. The American quintet ranks high in the basketball teams of the States and only two days ago lost a close contest to the renowned Dartmouth basketball squad. Their style of play will be something new around here. They depend mainly on height and aggressiveness, while McGill resorts to speed and straight shooting. Whatever be the turn-out of the game, the Redman should be able to pick up a few pointers from the visiting Yanks and use these to good avail against the Oilers on Tuesday.

tickets will return to the East end of the Gym where Blake Sewell will hold the spotlight for about three hours of dancing. Under the direction of Rex Freeman as Master of Ceremonies, the stage lines will be mixed up as far as possible by means of any form of novelty dances and ideas that may be invented, after which the dance will continue in comparatively normal fashion. During the main intermission an entertainment program will feature the popular songstress, Shirley Culley, with pianists Ben Albert and Morris Gelfand accompanying, as well as the mysterious McGill Rockettes, who have been practicing their routine for some weeks and promise some very good entertainment.

There are still a few tickets left and these will be sold at the door tonight to students only, on presentation of their library cards or other similar identification. The committee in charge of the Festival consists of Dick Balfour, basketball manager and chairman, Earl Corey in charge of orchestra and entertainment arrangements, Connie Cordell representing R.V.C., Eric Trigg for the Scarlet Key, and Norman Halford in charge of the sports program and publicity.

Coming Events

This play was a great success on Broadway and is now being acclaimed in London.

"There Shall Be No Night" is directed by Herbert H. Whitaker, drama critic of the Montreal Gazette, who for many years has been associated with the Montreal Repertory Theatre.

Cast in the play in leading roles are Charles Lewis, Fran Malls, Gordon Lightstone, Sol Cohen, Charles and Isobel Weinrauch. The play is scheduled for production on March 4, 5 and 6th. Reservations are being taken now.

The most important exhibition of Dutch art ever held on this Continent will be opened by the Governor-General in the Gallery of the Art Association in Montreal on March 8th. This Exhibition which will cover five centuries of Dutch art, is to be held for the benefit of the children of Great Britain, the Netherlands, France and other occupied countries, and will be open to the public for one month.

This Exhibition will include those national treasures of Holland which were placed for safe-keeping in the United States for the duration of the war. A magnificent Jan Steen which belongs to the private collection of Windsor Castle will be shown. This picture which was never before shown in a public Exhibition was lent by His Majesty, George VI for an Exhibition of Dutch Masters in the United States, on the request of the Dutch Government-in-Exile. The picture was flown over by the Ferry Command. Museums and private collectors in the United States and Canada are sending their masterpieces to the Gallery for the Exhibition. In all over a hundred pictures will be shown.

The five centuries of Dutch art begin with the Primitives, of the fifteenth century. The golden era of Dutch art which followed this period is represented by the works of Frans

Hals, Rembrandt, Fabritius, Cuyp, de Hooch, Vermeer and others. One Gallery will be set aside for the nineteenth century van Gogh. Thirty-one of his unique works will be shown. These will show the progress of his art from his earliest paintings until a few days before his tragic death when he painted the famous "Fourteenth of July", which will also be included.

The object for which the Exhibition is being organized, the welfare of the children who have suffered from the horrors of war, is one which is close to the hearts of everyone to-day. It is now generally known that it has been Hitler's policy to produce by malnutrition an unfit generation, and in the case of the children, he has succeeded. With invasion near at hand, it becomes all the more evident that supplies of food, clothing and medicines must follow our armies. The International Red Cross and other great humanitarian organizations are already making plans for this great work.

BLOC POPULAIRE CONVENTION OPENS

Provincial Autonomy Is Key-note of First Address — Raymond Sends Message

Andre Laurendeau, 35-year-old general secretary of the Bloc Populaire Canadian party, told delegates at the opening of the party's first annual convention in the Windsor Hotel last night that the Canadian people want a political policy which will respect the autonomy of the provinces, will be Canadian first of all.

He asked more than 300 delegates from all parts of the province, from Ontario and from the Maritimes how anyone could expect the old political parties to supply such a policy.

Mr. Laurendeau was the main speaker at the opening meeting of the convention, which was semi-public, the press being admitted.

Maxime Raymond, M.P. for Beauharnois-Laprairie, leader of the party, was not present for the opening of the congress but he forwarded a message in which he stated that the supporters of the party would learn at this convention details of the policy and the program of the Bloc Populaire Canadian. He promised that he would be present today to greet the delegates.

Mr. Laurendeau in his opening address stated that "the Canadian people obscurely want a policy which, without being jingo, will respect the autonomy of the provinces; a policy which, without being anti-British, will be Canadian first of all."

"Can the old parties give us this policy?" Mr. Laurendeau asked. "Can they care for these wounds they are greatly responsible for?" "Have they the necessary strength to pull us out of the predicament in which they have thrown us?"

"How could one dare entrust a dark future to these old parties, whose spine is formed not unlike a dollar sign? . . . How could one expect reforms for public salvation from these old parties which for more than 40 years have accumulated mostly ruins?" he asked.

The three day convention, which will terminate on Sunday with a luncheon meeting at noon, will be held behind closed doors. No definite information as to the reasons for the meetings being held in secret could be obtained last night, however it was learned from reliable sources that the meetings will be held in secret because of expected heated discussions over disunion within the party.

Tid-bits From the College Papers

Paying tribute to the McGill men and women in the service of their country, Dr. James said "You and I are living on borrowed time, the time that these gallant men and women have lent us. The sincerity of our gratitude for the sacrifices that they have made will be measured not by any words of sympathy and congratulation, but by the work we do to build the things for which they have fought."
